

WILL F. PHARES TO BOARD OF REGENTS

LUMBERMAN AND J. F. ROBERTSON OF GRANT CITY CHOSEN.

APPOINTED BY GOVERNOR

Mr. Phares Succeeds W. A. Blagg and Mr. Robertson, Charles L. Moseley of Stanberry.

According to word received in Maryville this morning, Governor Hyde has sent the names of Will F. Phares of this city and John F. Robertson of Grant City, as members of the board of regents of the State Teachers College at Maryville, to the senate for confirmation. Mr. Phares succeeds W. A. Blagg of this city whose term has expired, and Mr. Robertson succeeds Charles L. Moseley of Stanberry, whose term also has expired.

The appointments are made for a term of six years.

Mr. Phares has not received any official notice of his appointment and in view of that fact declined to make any statement today. While it is known it will be a personal sacrifice to Mr. Phares to accept, yet he felt it was his duty to serve. He has always been interested in the welfare of the college and his appointment will meet with general approval.

Mr. Robertson is president of the First National Bank of Grant City. He is well known among the bankers and loan men of this city and his appointment was regarded as a good one.

While Mr. Phares is a Republican in politics, Mr. Robertson is a Democrat, and the retiring members of the board are also members of the opposite political party. With the new appointments, the board stands four Democrats and three Republicans, the Democratic members remaining on the board being True D. Parr of Hamilton, Charles F. Ward of Plattsburg and Charles A. Lee, state superintendent of schools, an ex-officio member, and the Republican members remaining being B. G. Vorhees of St. Joseph, and George J. Stevenson of Tarkio.

Governor Hyde, if he had wished could have appointed two Republicans to the board at this time but decided that he would not change the political complexion of the board.

Mr. Phares as the Maryville member is the first local Republican to be on the board. Since he is the resident member he will be chosen as president of the board at their meeting to be held within the next few weeks.

Mr. Blagg, one of the retiring members of the board, was appointed by Governor Hadley in 1911. He was re-appointed by Governor Gardner in 1917. Mr. Blagg has worked faithfully for the interests of the college.

Among one of the first to congratulate Mr. Phares was Mr. Blagg.

DR. WINFIELD SCOTT HALL TO BE HERE

INTERNATIONALLY KNOWN LECTURER WILL SPEAK WEDNESDAY.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is Now Professor Emeritus of Northwestern University—To Speak at High School and College.

Dr. Winfield Scott Hall, internationally known lecturer on matters of eugenics, social ethics, home and health problems, will appear in Maryville, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church next Wednesday night.

The tentative schedule of addresses includes three talks: An address to the high school, then, it is possible Mr. Hall may be the speaker at the College assembly at 10 a. m. In the evening there will be a union service of all the churches, at about 8 o'clock. The hour is later than usual to permit some of the churches to carry out their individual church night programs before joining in the union service. Next week the definite schedule will be printed.

A number of years ago, Dr. Hall visited Maryville and carried out much the same sort of program that has been outlined for this visit. Many folks have also spoken of having in their homes some of the books he has written.

He is now professor emeritus of the medical faculty of Northwestern University, after twenty-two years of active teaching. He thus brings the knowledge of a skilled physician and an experienced teacher to bear on the discussion of social hygiene and sex education. He has many attractive lecture subjects for mixed audiences and also for audiences of men only, or women only. It is a usual thing for people to have to be turned away from places where he is speaking.

Last year he spoke to over 183,000 people in about 950 lectures, and it was no uncommon thing to have to turn people away from the building in which he spoke. It is a privilege for Maryville to have this leading authority on such important social matters here, and the Presbyterian Church is inviting all who can to attend the lectures.

Dr. Hall during the war, toured the army training camps and cantonments, and the naval training stations, and now is the associate secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Temperance and Moral Welfare, in charge of the Department of Social Hygiene.

Frank Hart Dies Suddenly at Mound City

Former Employee of Democrat-Forum Died While Walking to His Home Last Evening—No Arrangements.

J. Frank Hart, 65, of Mound City, a former resident of Maryville and employee of the Democrat-Forum, dropped dead about a half block from his home in that town last night at 9 o'clock. Hart was walking home from town with a friend when suddenly he sank to the sidewalk and was dead when his friend bent over him.

It is believed that death was caused by heart failure. Mr. Hart, who was on the force of the News-Jeffersonian in Mound City, had been in poor health for two years and had just recovered from a case of influenza.

Hart is survived by two brothers, Will and Charles in Mound City and by a sister in St. Joseph. He was single and there were no other relatives.

Funeral arrangements have not been definitely made.

From 1910 to 1915 Hart was an employee of the Democrat-Forum, working in the linotype department. While in Maryville he was a prominent lodge worker, being a member of the local I. O. O. F. lodge and a consistent worker in the Masonic order. In this order he held his membership in Kansas City but was a regular attendant at the Maryville lodge meetings.

Only yesterday Amos Sprecher, the secretary of the Maryville Odd Fellow lodge, received a letter from Mr. Hart. Before coming to Maryville Hart was the assistant foreman in the linotype department of the Kansas City Star and prior to that time, in the days of the hand-set type, he was on a St. Joseph paper.

The Mound City team defeated the Maryville High School girls in the final game for the championship of Class A, the first game of this afternoon, by a score of 26 to 19. The game started with a rush and for the first few minutes it looked as though the Maryville team had a decided advantage. However, inability to hit the basket proved disastrous to the hopes of Miss Nash's team and Mound City won the right to play for the grand championship as a representative of Class A tonight.

For the Maryville team Mildred New, at jumping center, was without doubt the star. Without her services the team would have fared much worse.

The whole team was a little off this afternoon and did not display the brand of basketball shown in this morning's game with Cameron.

As a preliminary to the championship game tonight the State Teachers College Kittycats will play an exhibition game with the losers of the two games this afternoon. The Maryville High sextet will oppose Miss MacLeod's Collegians in the first half of the game and in the second half the opposition will be furnished by the loser of the Class B championship game.

This game will start at 7:45 o'clock and will be followed forty-five minutes later by the grand championship game between Mound City and the winner of the Gower-Oregon game.

The all-Northwest high school teams will be picked by the officials of the tournament and will be announced tonight if these worthies have made their choice.

The local high school girls have gone beyond expectations. They were expected to lose their first game and instead they played clear through to the championship, with a commendable showing.

The score:

Maryville (19)—Dow, f; Raines, f; New, jr; Murray, re; O'Banion, g; Cook, g; Hurnbuckle, g.

Mound City (26)—Bagby, f; Bickel, f; M. Kenney, jr; Brown, re; H. Kenney, g; Creech, g.

Morning Games

The semi-final round in both classes of the girls basketball tournament was played this morning. In Class A Mound City and Maryville emerged from the fray victorious and in Class B Gower and Oregon were the winners.

The first game of the morning, played at 9 o'clock, was between Mound City and Bethany. The Mound City girls had a little the best of their opponents in size and their team play was also a trifle the superior. At the end of the first half Mound City held a 15 to 8 lead.

Maryville Springs a Surprise

The second game of the morning was by far the feature game of the tournament so far. In this game the Maryville high school girls took the measure of the Cameron team and sent them home in a black shroud to the land of music written in 24-20 time. The game was a thriller from the start and the spectators were treated to a fine exhibition of basketball.

The Maryville girls won by virtue of their ability to keep possession of (Continued on page 4)

Investigation Ordered of Fire in Army Camp

Washington, March 10—An investigation of a spectacular fire, which wiped out eight buildings in an army camp in Virginia just across the river from here, causing a $100,000 property damage and fourteen casualties, was ordered by acting secretary of war Davis. For a while the entire army post was threatened but assistance of fire fighting companies from Washington got the blaze under control early this morning. Twenty-six patients in an isolation ward at the fort hospital were carried to safety shortly before the building was gutted by flames. The main hospital building was saved only by the valiant efforts of soldiers and firemen. The fire started in the kitchens of the barracks and spread rapidly to other buildings.

Harding May Pass Up Palm Beach on Sunday

President Is in Good Spirits and Seems to Be Benefitted by His Vacation Cruise

Hope Sound, Fla., March 10.—The houseboat Pioneer, carrying President and Mrs. Harding and members of their boat party, arrived off this famous resort today after a cruise of some twenty-five miles down the river during the forenoon. The President abandoned his plan of stopping off for golf at Hope Sound at the last minute and decided to push on to Pal Beach.

The boat made a brief stop here, a few of the party going ashore, but the Hardings remained aboard.

Hope Sound, Fla., March 10—Following his way steadily southward, President Harding put in here today for his daily round of golf on the links before proceeding to Palm Beach and Miami, the play grounds of the South. He is in good spirits and appears much benefited physically by the open outdoor life he has enjoyed since striking Florida climate.

It seems uncertain whether or not Harding will break the isolation he has been enjoying by putting in at Palm Beach, for the week-end, for he is within easy reach of that resort. Having come to Florida for a complete rest and as much recreation as possible he may decide to pass up Palm Beach for the week end, stopping there only for his mail and telegrams, then pushing steadily on to fish at Miami.

Thus far those aboard the Pioneer have not engaged in fishing although the rivers through which they have passed have been abundant with fish. Farther south Harding plans to try for some of the big game fish plentiful on the southern coast of Florida.

Last night was the first time since the cruise started, that those aboard the houseboat have felt the pitter of rain. A shower of short duration fell, though those on board felt no discomfort. Here at Hope Sound the entire colony was out to meet the Pioneer. Among them were several personal friends of Harding, former resident of Ohio.

It was a gala day for the colony, a town that not even boasts of a telephone office. Mrs. Harding has left the boat but once since the cruise started five days ago, that being at Rock Lodge when she went aboard a short time to greet her brother. She spends a great deal of time in her deck chair, enjoying much rest and quiet, which, according to her physicians, is necessary for her recovery.

BESS CRANDALL THORP.

THE RISE OF PROSPERITY.

Reports of wholesale trade in ten communities in January show that sales were about 23 per cent above a year ago. Figures like these show that retail merchants all over the country have been buying freely. They indicate a general confidence that the people are going to be able to buy an excellent volume of goods for the rest of the year.

Times like these are the occasion when enterprising men branch out a little and take advantage of this rising tide of prosperity. They have the confidence to advertise freely, backed by the knowledge that the people are better able to buy goods, and will do so when they are informed of the special values that any merchant is offering.

The signs of inflation and financial danger are not in evidence as they were a year ago and values are becoming more stable if not lower. It is time when energetic business men should be able to gain rewards for their enterprise, without running risks of being involved in a financial smash.

THE COST OF GOVERNMENT.

The cost of all forms of government in this country, including federal, state and municipal expense, may be as much as $325 for each family of four persons. As this sum would probably include the cost of public schools, fire and police protection, etc., as well as the expense of military protection and the war debt, the country gets great benefits for its money.

However, if this vast sum of money were spent with the same efficiency that is achieved by business corporations, vastly better results could be had for less money.

Every citizen should think of himself as a stockholder in a great business concern which serves him and his family. He cannot expect satisfactory dividends in the shape of good government, unless he devotes effort and thought to his duties as a citizen. Every time he votes for a poorly qualified man for public office, he takes money out of his own pocket.

Carburetor—A small and cantankerous contrivance put into every car to make it harder.

Spark Plugs—Funny little things that are put into a motor to promote the "This is Clean Up Week" movement. Motor car drivers get great enjoyment taking these things out and then putting them back again after peering intently at them and scraping them with a nail file or a toothpick. Spark plugs are the part of the car you are supposed to first blame for anything that happens. They are assumed to be guilty until proved innocent. Much confusion is caused by the fact that the new drivers often mistake them for cigar lighters.

Pump—Anybody knows what a pump is.

Generator—A mysterious mechanism located somewhere between the radiator and the rear axle. Very few drivers ever get to know where it is or what it is supposed to do, and if so, whether it does.

Timing Gears—Something to do with the 8-day clock on the dash.

Ignition System—A system of ignition, presumably.

Cooling system—An apparatus for keeping motorists from the exploding point when driving with argumentative wives who find fault with the driving. In the latest models it is a small ice pack that can be clamped over the ears and forehead at a minute's notice.

Crank—A motorist's wife.

Fan—The thing you get your fingers caught in when monkeying around the engine at night.

Oil Can—A man who bought a car last May before prices began to be cut $200 and $300 at a stroke.

Transmission—Something under the floor.

Differential—Something no driver ever really understands clearly.

Housing—See landlords.

Crank Shaft—The part of the car that is most expensive to fix when you break it.

Steering Gear—The part of the car, according to the newspapers, which goes wrong before the accident.

Clutch—A new driver's grip on the steering wheel.

Brake—That part that so often smells like father's overshoes burning.

Speedometer—A contrivance put on the dash so a driver can tell how fast the motor cycle policeman who is following him is going.

Battery—(1) a military organization; (2) a park in New York; (3) a small black box under the floor of the car into which you always forget to put water, as warned to do, in the instruction book.

Universal Joint—A way of describing some of the gambling houses at a place like Monte Carlo.

Fender—The part of the car the taxi cab first rips off.

Bumper—A steel guard on the back of the car for small boys to ride on.

Elliptical Springs—Springs that are not elliptical.

Grease Cups—Small containers at various points on the car and which seldom have grease in them.

Tank—A derogatory term applied to a driver who drinks.

Oil Gauges—Small round things that never work.

"Jack"—Something that is kept in the back of the car and that is always found to have been stolen when the car owner looks for it.

Cord Tires—The equivalent of about $300 a season.—Worth County Tribune.

Fifty Years Ago

(From the files of the Nodaway Democrat, March 13, 1873).

During the past six weeks John W. Walker has shipped from this place 2,896 dozen eggs. The hens have certainly been industrious.

Hon. Scott K. Snively, our representative, was on a visit to his home during the past week. He returned to Jefferson City early this week.

The township election is not quite three weeks off, and the people of the different townships should be looking up their candidates. We shall be prepared to print tickets on short notice at any time.

Mr. S. C. Broderick, residing in the southeast part of the county, and who has one of the finest peach orchards in the county, informs us that the indications are that nine-tenths of the trees are killed. Also, that other orchards in the same vicinity have fared the same way. Reports from all parts of Central and North Missouri are to the same effect.

The Express and Telegraph offices have been removed to the new Central Hotel, where Mr. Gremis will still have charge of them.

To prove that wheat CAN be successfully raised in this latitude, we have only to mention that one farmer in Taylor County, last season raised 1100 bushels of wheat, a large portion of which he had already sold at good figures.

Mr. J. M. Hosmer has just opened an auction and commission house on Main street, opposite Crane's Book Store, where he will receive and sell goods and all kinds of stock on commission. He will continue to attend sales in the country when desired. He is experienced in the business and is confident that he can give perfect satisfaction in all cases. We recommend him to the patronage of the public generally.

Circuit Court next week promises a good deal of business. The docket contains 29 state cases, 24 on the return docket, and 104 for trial.

There will be preaching services tonight and tomorrow night at the Church of God in Maryville. Evangelist R. E. Hostetter of Stanberry will preach both evenings, his subject tonight to be, "What Is Man?" and tomorrow night, "The Gospel of Christ."

In the Interest Of Your Eyesight

DEFECTIVE Eyesight is responsible for many of the ills of humanity. It reduces efficiency and greatly hampers the activities of those afflicted. School children, backward in their studies, are often held back by the handicap of poor vision; millions of men and women find their work daily getting harder and harder. The pity of it is that so many of them are afflicted with fading vision and do not know just what is slowing them down. They are too apt to attribute their condition to some other cause, and neglect the relief so easily obtained and so close at hand.

Eyes overtaxed or strained cause headaches. If the trouble is not speedily corrected numerous other ailments may follow. Do not neglect this warning. Somewhere near you there is a Recognized Optometrist who can fit your eyes with glasses that will overcome your trouble and relieve you. He uses no medicines of any kind, but measures your vision by a more modern and scientific method and accurately fits your glasses—no hit or miss, no guess work.

You may protect yourself from inefficiency, and insure satisfaction, by patronizing only Optometrists who display the Emblem "THE SIGN OF SCIENTIFIC SERVICE"—somewhere about their offices. Only Competent Optometrists are allowed to display or use this Emblem. Always look for the Emblem. The following Optometrist is authorized to use this Emblem in Maryville:

RECOMPENSE

I think that when I look upon your face,

And glimpse your old glad smile, and see again

The eyes that caught their color from above;

When yet once more I view the easy grace

Of your light step, swift joy will verge on pain.

Mine will be bliss that earth knows nothing of;

But ecstasy will take me by the hand;

The brimming happiness I was denied

Like sudden sunshine will envelop me;

I shall be thankful that the one thin band

Which bound us broke, and cast me from your side,

Since with such gladness now your face I see.

—Elizabeth Scollard, in New York Sun.

SURELY WAS "SOME" DINNER

According to Menu, Provisions Are by No Means Scarce Among the Hollanders.

One hears from European travelers that Holland and Switzerland are the most expensive countries for tourists. It may be true, but judging from a bill of fare just received in New York, written by a bride staying at The Hague, food cost there is far less than here. This is what she and her husband had for dinner in a restaurant, at $2.40 apiece—the translations, in parenthesis, after each item, being those of the bride:

Huitres de Zeland (a dozen oysters).

Selections d'hors d'oeuvre (at least 26 different hors d'oeuvre, one more delicious than the other).

Consomme printanier royal (sort of calf's head soup; not so good).

Turbot Duglere (fish fit for the gods, with potatoes).

Cuisson de Veau Dubarry (veal served with peas, beans, carrots, artichokes, Brussels sprouts and another vegetable, and two kinds of potatoes; a meal in itself).

Pomlet roti an cresson compute fine (a whole roast chicken, with still different potatoes and lettuce salad and compot of wonderful greenages and apricots; another meal).

Celeri Bordelaise (specially prepared dish of celery).

Homard fraise-salade (a cold lobster still in the shell).

Fromage and fruits (four kinds of cheese, nuts, raisins, pears, grapes, oranges, bananas).

"Result," wrote the bride, "two sick young people!"

Hammer of Glass.

Of all the materials which might be selected for the making of a hammer, glass would seem to be the least probable. Yet we are told that this has now been accomplished in Bohemia by the production of a kind of glass which may be heated red hot and plunged into water without breaking. When cooled, such glass is hard enough for a hammer which has only ordinary use.

Rope of Squirrel Tails.

A rope made of 3,000 squirrel tails was recently on display at the office of the Montana extension director. The rope was made by the Blackfoot Indian chief Split-ear, and his tribal assistants, who live near Browning, in Glacier county, Montana.

In the Eastern township, Quebec, a woman celebrated her ninety-sixth birthday last month. On the same day her son and granddaughter also celebrated their birthdays, a unique celebration.

Odd Marriage Coincidence.

Arthur Claude Smith, who was married at Streatham, Ontario, recently, was the fourth of a quartette of brothers to marry four sisters. The brides were also named Smith.

AND LOUD ENOUGH

By CORONA REMINGTON

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"It's a well-known fact that if you want a thing hard enough you get it—that is hard enough and long enough."

John Winton straightened in his seat and stared at the lecturer. It was the first remark Doctor Jameson had made that had attracted his attention.

"The magic of wishing," the lecturer went on, "that's what you might call it—for its power is often magical, and I could cite hundreds of cases where the effect has been almost miraculous. Just get the image of the thing you want in your mind and dwell upon it. Think of it frequently and see it clearly and work for it. Make your every aim a stepping stone toward that one goal. Don't get the idea that all you have to do is to pray for it; the Lord helps those who help themselves. Combine the two—wishing and working."

"That's all today, Thank you." Amid a short, enthusiastic spatter of applause the lecturer left the platform and John Winton slowly worked his way out of the room with the crowd.

"Pretty good lecture, eh, Winton? You know, I believe there's something in that wishing business."

"I'm inclined to think so, too," John answered.

"Yes, and to wish loud enough should be put into the requirements. Some folks want a thing they could have for the asking, but they don't know how to ask."

Winton gaped at Macmillan.

"I wonder if that isn't my case," he said, after a pause.

"Your case! Pshaw! You've never wanted a thing in your life. You're the luckiest young chap I ever knew. You've got brains and an education and money and social position. How much more do you want?"

"I'd give it all for one thing that I haven't."

"You won't have to—just wish for it hard enough and long enough and loud enough and you'll get it."

"Do you really believe that?" asked the other man eagerly.

"Sure I do. I've been here longer than you have and I've seen it work too many times."

They were now on the steps of the building.

"Well, I've certainly wished for it long enough and hard enough," laughed the younger man.

"How long and how hard?"

"Harder than I ever wished for anything in my whole life and every day for nearly three years."

"It must be a case of loud enough then."

"I know it wouldn't do any good," the other replied dolefully.

"No harm in trying," his friend answered hopefully. "Well, so long—see you at the club tonight?"

"Frankly not. I have an engagement."

"And loud enough." The words rang in John's ears all the afternoon. But what earthly use was there in being loud when you knew it was no good? Hadn't Alice Moore as good as told him a thousand times she was in love with Bob Caldwell? And didn't she rave over all he did and said? Why humiliate oneself unnecessarily? Who wanted to be thrown down, anyway?

If only she had given him one tiny atom of encouragement, but instead—

Loud enough. The idea floated through his mind again. He certainly had not been very loud about it. Just to disprove the theory he would be. What if he did get humiliated? He could stand it and no one would ever know except Alice. She certainly was not the kind of girl to boast about her proposals.

As he walked up the front steps of the Moore home that night his knees nearly gave way beneath him, but the impassive servant evidently noticed nothing as he took his hat and gloves and showed him into the library. In a moment Alice would be there. In another moment he would be telling her—in another she would be turning him down gently but firmly. He must do it the second she came in or he would lose all courage.

John Winton was not a professional proposer. But he evidently got his order of procedure mixed for at the first sight of her he took her in his arms and muttered and stammered something or other about love and marriage. To his utter surprise she made no effort to free herself, but hid her face on his shoulder and slipped two timid arms around his neck.

"Do you know," said Alice after a while, "I heard a wonderful lecture this afternoon by a Doctor Jameson and he said that you could get anything you wanted if you wished for it hard enough and long enough—and I believe it's true. I—I wished for something terribly hard and I got it today."

John held her closer and kissed the soft brown hair.

"But you must always be sure to wish loud enough, too, dear," she laughed.

Additional Cleansing.

In a city noted for its industrial grime, Commissioner Cloe wants to "clean up" the rooming house. His desire is predicated on what the pulpsters call "high moral grounds," but we would respectfully suggest that at least 80 per cent of them need a liberal application of soap and water.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Parental Blessing

By JANE OSBORN

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mr. and Mrs. Drew were leisurely eating breakfast—with the new leisure that had recently come since Mr. Drew's retirement. Their contentment was almost complete. Still, Mrs. Drew sighed a little sigh as she poured the coffee from the electric percolator and then daintily added sugar and cream to Mr. Drew's liking. Mr. Drew knew the cause of that sigh, and he asked no questions, only looked tenderly into his wife's eyes as he took the cup she passed across the little breakfast table and discarded his morning paper so that he could devote himself entirely to her. As the days drew near for their son's return her impatience was not to be wondered at.

It was then that their maid arrived with the telegram that had just been delivered at the door and that set the pulses of both Mr. and Mrs. Drew beating faster and fired them with a curious medley of fears and hopes.

"You read it, quickly," said Mrs. Drew, trying to smile; and her husband, with a quaver in his voice that he tried to hide, began:

"Sailing for home today. May I bring bride home with me? Wire answer with $100 to Browns in Boston. 'TIM'."

"It's dated yesterday," Mr. Drew commented. Bride, bride. Why, mother, isn't this unexpected? He hasn't said anything about a girl in his letters—"

"No, but then Timothy wouldn't," said his mother with a becoming little blush.

"Well, I hope it isn't some Eskimo girl or Indian he's come across up there—"

"Now, John," protested the doting mother, "you know Timothy wouldn't do anything rash. There are probably a few nice American girls up there. Perhaps a nurse or a teacher. He's learned to admire her, and, of course, we'll welcome her as our own—"

"Well, I'm blessed!" chuckled the father. "I won't raise a fuss, of course; though one of the last things I told him was not to marry too young. Timothy is only twenty-two. I was twenty-five before I married you. I wanted him to know the satisfaction of being able to provide for his wife from his own earnings. I told him I wouldn't advance any money—for a wife—but, of course, I'll do the right thing—for your sake, mother, if for no other reason." Mr. Drew paused to laugh at a laugh that was a sort of reminiscent chuckle. "I'm blessed! He's a sly one—writes us letters telling about his working so hard up there in Labrador, blazing the trail through new territory for his concern, camping with fishermen, never seeing a woman, and—well, I'm blessed—"

"I'm not a bit upset about it," Mrs. Drew assured, deliberately eating a piece of toast to show that she hadn't even lost her appetite. "I'll get the two west rooms ready for them. There will be two weeks before they can possibly get here, won't they, father? I should think she—his bride—would like ruffled Swiss curtains, don't you?"

But Mr. Drew did not hear much of his wife's plans to refurbish the west rooms. He was planning the wording of his message back to his son to await him at Boston. It was characteristic of him not to show the letter he wrote to his wife, but she knew he had done the right thing.

The letter began and ended with a hearty congratulation, and it was padded with an order on the Boston banker mentioned in Timothy's wireless for $3,000, which Timothy might need for current expenses. Thirty thousand dollars was waiting for Timothy, the father said, as soon as he returned. He had suggested before, he recalled, that Timothy should wait, but since the deed was done—well, if he loved the girl enough to go ahead and get married, why, well and good. What did he mean, anyway, by asking for a paltry $100—didn't he know his father?

Timothy Drew, looking rugged and brown and weighing fifteen pounds more than when he had started out four months before, arrived in Boston on the day expected and lost no time in going to his bankers. He had received a good enough salary from the concern which had employed him to go prospecting in the North, and he knew that his commissions would be more than gratifying, but his orders had been to hold most of his salary to his account in their New York office. He had merely wanted to borrow the $100 for immediate expenses from his father.

A young medical student whom he had met in his wanderings was his companion. He went with him to the bank, and Timothy had suggested that he kill five or six hours while he (Timothy) went to call on a girl he used to know out in the Back Bay section.

"I'd like you to come with me, Bride," he said, "only there wouldn't be any nourishment in it for you—and, well, I'm pretty fond of the girl, anyway."

Then he called at the bank, and to his amazement was informed that $3,000 had been deposited there for him. Two letters had likewise been received. One was from Timothy's mother and the other from his father. Timothy had to read each letter several times before he grasped their significance, and even then he was left in confusion. So he read them to his companion.

Tom Bride laughed. "What did you say in your telegram?"

"Just asked to have dad forward a hundred dollars and said I was bringing you home with me."

"How did you say that—I mean the part about bringing me with you?" "May I bring Bride home with me?" I suppose. How else would I say it?"

"Well, don't you see?" And both young men laughed. "You see I've gone around with that name for some years and I'm getting used to its possibilities. Punsers reap a rare harvest from it—but this is really the best yet."

Timothy went, still in some confusion, off to Back Bay to call on the girl he knew—Alleen Monroe, daughter of an old friend of his mother. Timothy had loved her since he had met her two years before, but he had never hinted this to his mother, because he wasn't at all sure of Alleen's feelings and didn't feel in a position to ask her to become his wife. They had exchanged letters during his absence and the letters from Alleen had left little doubt that she returned a measure of his heart of affection. Timothy read the letters to Alleen and laughed over them.

"Isn't it dreadful to disappoint them?" asked Alleen, with mock sadness. "I imagine your mother has furnished the guest rooms all over for the bride—and they've killed the fatted calf and everything. And now you're going to go home with John Bride. It's really cruel."

"They might have known it was Tom," said Timothy. "I've mentioned him in my letters a few times. Still—well, it's all very funny, and, say, Alleen, if you really think they'd be so desperately disappointed, why, you wouldn't consent to—Alleen, don't you see what I mean? Would you, right now, I mean? Then we could start back tomorrow or the next day and—"

"I'd hate to disappoint that dear mother of yours when she's all ready for a new daughter-in-law," said Alleen. "But what about Mr. Bride?" "Hang Bride!" exploded Timothy. "He was going home with me just for a chance to get straightened out and sort of civilized before he started in at medical college. I guess he'd be jolly well satisfied to stay as my guest in a bang-up New York hotel for a week instead—and he's got a girl in New York."

So Timothy, after all, took his bride home with him.

MUST SEE FOOD TO TASTE IT

More Delicate Flavors, It Is Asserted, Cannot Be Discerned by One Sense Alone.

What we know as taste is a somewhat more complicated sense than is commonly supposed, remarks a writer in the Scientific American. As a matter of fact with the sense of taste alone it is only possible to detect four flavors, which are sweet, sour, bitter and salt. All the more delicate flavors are discerned with the aid of the sense of smell. This is easily proved by holding the nostrils when eating any kind of jam, for instance. In such conditions it is quite impossible to detect the special flavor of the fruit. A yet more curious point is to be found in the fact that the ability to taste is to an extent, at any rate, dependent upon sight. Few people can detect the difference between beer and stout if they drink with their eyes closed. There are also a certain number of persons about who cannot tell tea from coffee if they shut their eyes when drinking. Most of the men blinded during the war lost all pleasure in smoking; they said the tobacco had no flavor to them. In many cases by using a stronger tobacco the lost pleasure in smoking has been regained. An interesting test for ordinary people is to close the eyes while smoking a pipe or a cigarette. It is amazing the difference that is made, proving beyond all doubt that seeing the curling smoke has a great deal to do with appreciating the aroma of the tobacco.

So all this seems to indicate that, after all, the senses of smell and sight are highly important in exercising our full sense of taste.

"Doctor Inkpot." "Doctor Inkpot" was a nickname given to John Standish, who, says Wood, in his Athenae Oxoniensis, "when Queen Mary ruled the scepter . . . seeing what great mischief was like to follow upon the translation of the Bible into the English tongue in the time of King Edward, and before, hesitated himself so much about it, that he found means to have the matter proposed in parliament. In the beginning of Queen Mary, that all such Bibles that were in the English tongue should be prohibited and burned. This being very displeasing to many, he was hated of them, and therefore one, after his usual manner, calls him 'morlo' and 'scurra,' and another as foulmouth'd as he, 'Doctor Inkpot.'"

In the Inner Artistic Circles. A Parisian art dealer went to call on an artist, who proudly displayed his latest work. They discussed its fine points and the dealer finally inquired as to what valuation was placed on the painting.

"I value this picture at $25,000," declared the artist firmly. "Do you not agree with me, my friend?"

"Of a certainty," assented the dealer heartily. "Furthermore, I think I know where I can get $40 for it."

"Sold!" said the artist.

NEVER WAS REALLY LONELY

Man, Far From Neighbors, Had a Variety of Things to Occupy His Attention.

Seated on the grass in front of a log cabin was a man cleaning a double-barreled shotgun. A stranger approached and asked how far it was to the next farm.

"About two miles," was the reply. "As far as that? You must find it very lonely here."

"Can't say I do," replied the man with the gun.

"Perhaps you are not one of the lonely kind?" suggested the stranger.

"No, I'm not. But, you see, I mortgaged this place, and as I couldn't pay, they foreclosed on me."

"I see."

"That was two years ago," continued the man, "and the sheriff has been trying to get possession ever since. He comes twice a week, and we have a shot at each other. And at least twice a week some fool comes along and wants to know if I ain't lonely. When you add claim-jumpers, rattle-snakes and skunks, this life is about the most exciting thing I've struck. There comes the sheriff now. You'd better get down behind that log and keep clear of his buckshot."

NAMED FOR GOVERNOR GERRY

Word That Has Long Been Common in the Language Originated in Political Trick.

The once uncouth name for a political trick is today to be found in any dictionary of the English language. It is "gerrymander." In 1812 the Democratic-Republican party was in power in Massachusetts, but did not hope to retain its control in the approaching elections. To save something for the party, the legislature passed, and Gov. Elbridge Gerry, later vice president, signed a reapportionment bill constructing at least one representative district of exceptional unfairness.

A Federalist editor, wrathful of the trick that was played upon his party, hung a map showing this district, over his desk, where all might see it. Gilbert Stuart, the famous painter, noticed the monstrosity one day, and with his ready pencil added head, wings and claws, exclaiming: "That will do for a salamander." "Better say Gerry-mander," growled the editor, a bitter opponent of Governor Gerry.

Tree-Lined Roads.

The roads of remembrance will have an actual beginning in New York on a large scale. The planting will be pushed as far as possible, which means as long as weather conditions and the supply of trees permit, says the American Forestry Magazine. The work will be carried on by competent hands as befits the splendid purpose to which the trees will be consecrated. In this way the upkeep and replacements will be reduced to a minimum and the health and longevity of the trees will be insured. Prof. Alan F. Arnold will represent the forestry college in co-operating with the highway department and the conservation commission. The planting, when completed in accordance with present plans, will be more than 400 miles in length.

Remarkable Escape From Death.

When their car went over a hundred foot embankment at Nannygoat hill, near Ottawa, Canada, turning over seven times, a young farmer from Bowville and three other companions had a remarkable escape from death. By crouching low in their seats they escaped injury other than a few scratches and bruises. The car landed right side up at the foot of the hill, terribly battered but not vitally damaged. The car, it is said, had been going about twenty miles an hour when it made the dive.

MOUND CITY AND OREGON IN FINALS

the ball. Although the Cameron set had their share of shots it was the Maryville centers that proved the winning factor of the game.

If these centers don't place on the all-Northwest teams then something is wrong with the eyes of those who choose the teams. Mildred New should easily make the first team jumping center and if Fern Murray don't hook a place on either the first or second teams then the writer misses his guess.

At the end of the first half of the game Maryville had a bare two point lead, the score being 13 to 11. In the second half the playing was even harder and faster and it was in the last two minutes that the four point lead was obtained.

A Gower Star

In the Gower-Guilford game Gower won because on her team there was a forward who was the whole team. This girl, who towers above any in the tournament, would get the ball and shoot and that was all there was to it. It was just a case of the other five players feeding her. She made all of the points. The score was 34 to 30.

Guilford had the better team, as far as team work goes, but they were smaller and just couldn't cope with the size of their opponents.

Oregon-Skidmore.

The last game this morning was between Oregon and Skidmore. The game ended with the score standing 36 to 15 in favor of Oregon. The Skidmore guards seemed to be unable to ring in the baskets, and the Oregon forwards worked together very well.

Games Late Yesterday.

Playing what was conceded to be a losing battle the Maryville High School girls won their way to the semifinals of the class A tourney yesterday by their defeat of the Albany girls in a 16 to 12 game. It was generally conceded by the dopsters that the Maryville team was weak and would not weather the storm of the preliminaries but Miss Nash's basket-ers showed their stuff yesterday and played basketball par excellence. Their team work was by far the class of the tournament and had they been able to hit the basket the score would have been much larger.

Ravenwood Battles Rosendale

Beginning with the Ravenwood Rosendale game yesterday afternoon the type of basketball displayed was better than it had been all through the first round. The weaker teams had been eliminated and the strong ones were all making a strong bid to stay in the race for the championship.

In the first part of the game between the Rosendale and Ravenwood schools the former had the advantage and when the half ended the score was 10 to 3 in their favor. However in the second period the Ravenwood girls came back stronger and battled until the last. The final score was 17 to 13.

Guilford-Laredo Game

The next game was between Laredo and Guilford. Both teams started out with a rush and both were stronger on the defense. After fifteen minutes of battling the half ended with the count knotted at two all. In the second half the Guilford offense strengthened a little and when the game ended they had scored an additional six points and had held their opponents to a goose-egg. The final count was 8 to 2.

The last game of the afternoon was between Burlington Junction and Gower. These two teams were about evenly matched and the fight was bitter from the start. At the end of the first half the Burlington Junction team held a slight lead with the score standing 14 to 11.

Burlington Jct. Fights Gately

In the second period some of the Junction players became a little overzealous about holding their lead and a number of fouls were called. Three of these resulted in the taking from the game of Miss Ware, their star guard, who was holding down Miss Bruckner, the Gower star forward. From this on the stellar light of the Gower team went strong and soon the score was tied and just before the gun went off the winning goal was dropped through the wicket, Gower winning, 25 to 23.

Last Night's Games.

The night games were both good. In the first, the Oregon sextet took their Parnell rivals into camp by a 35 to 29 score. At the end of the half Oregon was leading 19 to 16 and in the second period this lead was increased and the victory was assured.

Skidmore, a Black Horse

In the last game came the surprise of the tourney so far. The Rosendale team, supposedly invincible in their class, fell before the prowess of the Skidmore lassies. It was a good game. Coming from behind a 2 to 6 score at the end of the half the victors gradually cut down the lead and finally tied the score. Then a minute later a field goal gave the necessary lead to win the game. The score was 11 to 9. The box scores: Maryville (16)—Dow, f; Raines, f; New, jc; Murray, rc; O'Banion, g; Cook, g.
